Workforce Development Management System

The WDMS consists of the organization’s demographic information, education and outreach efforts and the 11 Key Components of a workforce development program. All of these are confidential; no organization-specific information will be shared. ABC will aggregate the data to determine collective workforce development trends, and this information will become part of ABC’s annual WDMS data analysis, a member benchmarking tool.

The purpose of the WDMS is to provide members with a tool to self-evaluate their current workforce development programs and identify opportunities for improvement. The member’s workforce development program is important, and likely woven into many existing processes and procedures. This creates complexity, and care should be taken when implementing WDMS recommendations. Making improvements to a workforce development program should be planned, scheduled, implemented, evaluated and modified.

Creating the best possible workforce development program that will meet the needs of your organization is not a race to the finish line. Do not attempt to make all WDMS recommended improvements at once. Implement a few recommendations, evaluate the outcome, and when the organization is comfortable and ready, implement a few more.

<td>WDMS is a workforce development benchmarking and improvement tool. ABC encourages each participant to engage as many employees as possible in the process. Having more participants in the evaluation process will result in a truer assessment of your workforce development program and a more comprehensive look at areas for improvement.</td>
